- God Dammit! - it was an accident.

- How was I to know that it was the cousin of the grand-uncle of the half-brother of Countess Emanuelle von Liebewitz of Nuln?

And it was most certainly an honest duel. Not something to get so upset about.

And it wasn't my fault that his powder was wet and his foil had been replaced with one that had no blade.

And he had said some really bad things about my mother. I think - I mean Gerhardt Breuning, who told me so, has always been a good friend.

And he didn't even die from it. I do pity him, with his knee, his eye, his nose and whatnot.

But in the name of Myrmidia - Accidents do happen in duels.

Well, they drove me out of Altdorf. And my family renounced me. And made me an outlaw in all of Reikland.

I've been wandering around a lot lately. I've even made some friends, of sorts. But now my money are running out.

I'm just simply not made to eat oatmeal.
